Piper's campaign merits applause

By Michael Allan Marion

There stands the Willy Piper and his crusade against the closing of Conestoga's Cambridge campus.

It is certainly not every day that someone comes out with this college puts up a fight against the administration's recently acquired decision with confidence about the will the college have?

Piper, an Ontario-based radio producer, is fighting the closure of a campus that is incompatible with the college's new jobs and training focus.

Piper argues that Conestoga's students should be able to continue their education in the Cambridge campus if they believe in the college's mission to provide students with relevant education and training.

Piper probably won't win his case and there are sound economic reasons that suggest he shouldn't. John Thomas, college president, says providing full campus services for the 1000 students would be a waste of money as the 30 to 50 students it produces each year. And as he says, it would be cheaper to relocate those students' education to the Deon campus.

Yes, even so, Piper's fight is not being lost. The college's decision, while important, is not an absolute one. It is a decision that is being reviewed and it is being reviewed while it is being reviewed. It is being reviewed while it is being reviewed.

The college certainly has a duty to the taxpayers to deliver post-secondary education in an efficient way. But it is not a duty to deliver education in a way that is not efficient. It is a duty to deliver education in a way that is not efficient.

Piper may not succeed in saving the Cambridge campus, but he is a fighter. He is a fighter who is a fighter. He is a fighter who is a fighter.

No ahead kid... make my day!

Abortion just one more piece on checkerboard of policies
